

Berry-Althoff

Languedoc-Roussillon, France

Winemaker: Imogen Berry & Robin Althoff

Region: Languedoc-Roussillon, France

Location: Aubais, France

Appellation: IGP Gard

Estate vines located in the Liverna in Aubais

14 days maceration on skins, co-fermented, and then aged 16 months in clay amphora and stainless steel

Certified Organic

51% Viognier & 49% Chardonnay

About the Winery/Winemaker

Berry-Althoff is the biodynamic project of Imogen Berry and Robin Althoff, farming 10 hectares of limestone vineyards in Aubais while also sourcing certified organic fruit from trusted growers across southern France. Each plot was meticulously selected for its terroir and its natural biodiversity to ensure that our crops grow in the healthiest environments. Their white wines are planted on yellow marls in Saint-Mamert-du-Gard, a particularly humid valley benefiting from the freshness of the Cévennes. To preserve the minerality and freshness in their reds, they chose vineyards planted on limestones dating from the Hauterivian and Valanginian periods around the village of Aubais. They sought out old vineyards planted in the 60s to work from massal selections resulting in healthier vines producing higher quality fruit. Their minimalist, precise approach relies on hand-harvested grapes, native yeast fermentations, and little to no added sulfur, producing vibrant wines that capture the character of the Mediterranean.